Explain Your Strategy	The navbar will be two rows, with each row separated into three sections. These sections will be populated with inline elements. No hoverable things will be considered. The main interface will be a window height background image with other absolutely situated elements in front of it. The absolutely situated elements will consist of four columns of relatively positioned inner content. All the image assets can be obtained by looking at the image sources from an inspect tray, click them open and download the images. Use jQuery to complete the moving carousal. Two hidden images will be prepared outside a view's perspective each time a new image is rendered.
